

This short text, known as the Dhāraṇī for Pacifying Tumors, belongs to the genre

Toh 783 · Derge Kangyur

This short text, known as the Dhāraṇī for Pacifying Tumors, belongs to the genre of dhāraṇī literature—brief incantatory formulas invoking protective or curative power through sacred sound—here specifically directed toward healing swollen growths or tumors of the spleen through ritual recitation combined with the application of certain substances. Opening with homage to the Three Jewels, it presents a mantra built from resonant syllables and invocations to the tathāgatas, to be recited twenty-one times as part of a healing rite, with the text itself testifying confidently to its efficacy. No distinct Sanskrit or Tibetan title beyond this descriptive designation is given, reflecting the practical, formulaic character typical of such dhāraṇīs preserved in the canon. This work is catalogued as Toh 783 in the Kangyur, situated among the collection of dhāraṇī texts that address specific practical and medical concerns through mantric means.

Homage to the Three Jewels.

Oṃ mukha mukhi trimukhi trimukhi sahasramukhi tathāgatamukha sthīhana chinda chinda bhinda bhinda svasthānaṃ gaccha svāhā svāhā.

Having recited this twenty-one times over madse, partaka, and long gagon, the tumor of the spleen will be pacified. There is no doubt of this.

This completes the Dhāraṇī for Pacifying Tumors.

Translator's Notes

- This is a short medical dhāraṇī text, and several points remain genuinely uncertain due to the terse, phonetically rendered nature of the source. First, the mantra syllables are given in Tibetan transliteration of Sanskrit and have been rendered here in a standard reconstructed form (invoking the "thousand-faced" Tathāgata to "cut, cut, break, break, go to your own place"); the exact original San

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.