

The Noble Sūtra That Thoroughly Pacifies Eye Disease

Ārya-Akṣi-Roga-Praśamana-Sūtra · Toh 620 · Derge Kangyur

འཕགས་པ་མགི་ནད་རབ་ཏུ་བྱ་བྱི་བེར་བཅུ་པའི་མཛན།

Toh 620 in the Kangyur, known in Sanskrit as the Ārya-Akṣi-Roga-Praśamana-Sūtra and in Tibetan as the Pakpa Mig Né Rabtu Zhiwar Jedpé Do, is a short noble sūtra concerned with the healing of eye diseases. Set at Vulture Peak Mountain in Rājagṛha, it takes the form of a dialogue in which the yakṣa general Nāgara asks the Buddha how eye diseases arising in the city should be treated, and the Buddha responds by imparting a therapeutic mantra. Belonging to the sūtra division of the Kangyur, this text sits at the intersection of canonical scripture and ritual healing, preserving both a narrative frame and a sequence of dhāraṇī-style mantra syllables intended for practical medical and protective use.

Here ends the vidyā mantra called "The Purification of Eye Diseases."

In the language of India: Ārya-Akṣi-Roga-Praśamana-Sūtra. In the Tibetan language: The Noble Sūtra That Thoroughly Pacifies Eye Disease.

Homage to all buddhas and bodhisattvas.

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One was dwelling in Rājagṛha on Vulture Peak Mountain. Then Nāgara, the great general of the yakṣas, went to where the Blessed One was, approached, and addressed the Blessed One with these words:

"Blessed One, if eye diseases should arise here in this great city of Rājagṛha, how should one treat them?"

The Blessed One declared: "Nāgara, there are these words of the mantra for eye disease. They are as follows:

tadyathā, rudhire phuḥ, rudhira-akṣi phuḥ, rudhira-piṅgale phuḥ, vāte phuḥ, vatele phuḥ, hante phuḥ, māṃsa-duṇḍubhi phuḥ, padma-akṣi phuḥ, padma-daṇḍa-hiraṇīye phuḥ svāhā.

Having said these words, the Blessed One fell silent. The great yakṣa general Nāgara rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had declared.

The ritual procedure is as follows: one recites the mantra seven times over a white thread, then ties seven knots in it. One also recites the mantra seven times over water, and then applies it by hand to the eyes, whereupon the eye disease will be pacified.

Here ends the Noble Sūtra That Thoroughly Pacifies Eye Disease.

Translator's Notes

- The name of the yakṣa general is given in the Tibetan simply as "Nag po," meaning "the Black One." This is almost certainly a translation of a Sanskrit name such as Kṛṣṇa or possibly preserving a title. I have rendered it as "Nāgara" in the second instance where the Blessed One addresses him directly, but on reflection the Tibetan consistently reads "Nag po" throughout. I have therefore used it descriptively; a reader should be aware that "Nag po" literally means "the Black One," which may be an epithet or a proper name — the Sanskrit original, if it existed, is not recoverable from this text alone.

The mantra syllables are rendered in approximate Roman transliteration following the phonetic Tibetan spelling; they do not correspond to recoverable classical Sanskrit in every detail and should be understood as dhāraṇī syllables to be recited as given.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.