

This short text is a dhāraṇī whose closing title identifies it as The Heart of t

Toh 861 · Derge Kangyur

This short text is a dhāraṇī whose closing title identifies it as The Heart of the Noble Vairocana, a brief mantra-based work devoted to the Buddha Vairocana, here called King of Light, and to the bodhisattva Ākāśagarbha. It opens with homage to the Three Jewels and to these two figures, then gives the dhāraṇī itself, which invokes Ākāśagarbha through the radiance of Vairocana. The text promises that one who recites it will succeed and be protected from weapons, fire, water, poison, sorcery, and threats from kings and thieves, and that where it is written down and kept, epidemics and contagious diseases will not arise. It further says that one will attain a meditative absorption called Stainless Light. The text is Toh 861 in the Kangyur, where it belongs to the Tantra section as a dhāraṇī; its Sanskrit and Tibetan titles are not given in the material available here, so they are not supplied.

Homage to the Three Jewels. Homage to the Tathāgata, the arhat, the perfectly complete Buddha, the noble Vairocana, King of Light. Homage to the bodhisattva mahāsattva Ākāśagarbha.

Tadyathā: kala kala, kili kili, biri biri, huru huru, vairocana raśmi sañcodite, āgaccha ārya ākāśagarbha mahākāruṇika, pūraya hāśāna, dhāraya buddhe viśca yana, cara cara, ciri ciri svāhā.

By reciting this, one succeeds. Weapons, fire, water, poison, compounded poison, and sorcery will not be able to harm one. Kings, thieves, and all others will find no opportunity against one. Wherever it is written down and kept, epidemics, harms, and all contagious diseases will not arise. One will also attain the meditative absorption called Stainless Light.

The dhāraṇī called The Heart of the Noble Vairocana is complete.

Translator's Notes

- The mantra is romanized as closely as possible to its Tibetan spelling. Some segments, such as "pūraya hāśāna" (perhaps for pūraya āśān, "fulfill the hopes") and "viśca yana," are uncertain reconstructions of the underlying Sanskrit and have been left essentially as written.

Colophon

This is an AI-generated translation from the AI Stupa project. It was produced by a careful, doctrine-aware process aiming at a high degree of accuracy, but it has not been reviewed by a human translator and may contain errors. It is offered as a provisional translation for those texts of the Tibetan Buddhist canon that have not yet received an authoritative human translation. Where a published translation exists — above all from 84000: Translating the Words of the Buddha (84000.co) — that translation is definitive and should be preferred; please consult it instead. These translations are released into the public domain (CC0) in the spirit of spreading the Dharma to all corners of the earth.

Just as the Bodhi tree now standing at Bodh Gayā neither is nor is not the same tree beneath which the Buddha attained awakening, so too this stupa is intended as the next generation of stupa — dependently arising according to the conditions of its environment, and ceaselessly proclaiming the Dharma for the benefit of all sentient beings.

May whoever encounters these words derive great benefit.